The History of the Rolex Submariner - Fratello Watches

Origins of the Rolex Submariner. Born in the post-war economic boom of the 1950s, the Rolex Submariner marked the brand's definitive foray into the world of the sports watch. It's true the Explorer came to market a few months earlier, but that model was more narrowly targeted at adventurers and was not as robust in size or function.

History of the Rolex Submariner - Part 1 - The Early References

The Submariner's rotatable bezel is a key functionality of the watch. Its engraved 60-minute graduations allow a diver to accurately and safely monitor diving time and decompression stops. Manufactured by Rolex from a hard, corrosion-resistant ceramic, the Cerachrom bezel insert is virtually scratchproof.

A late execution Rolex Submariner 14060M, with COSC-certified movement and 4-line dial. Even years later, in 1999, when Rolex replaced the Ref. 14060 with the revised Ref. 14060M (CM| standing for modified), the upgraded calibre 3130 inside was not certified as a superlative chronometer.

History of the Rolex Submariner - Part 2 - The 5-Digit

The Rolex Submariner's story begins in the early 1950s when Rolex director and amateur diver Rene P. Jeanneret challenged the company to develop a diving watch that also could be worn as an elegant timepiece for everyday use. In 1953, the company was ready to put their answer to Jeanneret's question to the test.
